Who are some professors to contact?

Dr. Hunt

- Medical Anthropology
- Current Research (in collaboration with Dr. Howard): using ethnographic methods to examine how genomic concepts and discourse are incorporated into the management of chronic illness for ethnically diverse patients. By contrasting practitioner and patient perspectives in diabetes and weight management clinics, the study explores both ethical and practical dimensions of the clinical application of these innovations.

Email: huntli@msu.edu

Dr. Radonic

- Research Interests: political ecology and water governance in the U.S.-México Borderlands
- Might need help with translation in Spanish

Email: radonicl@msu.edu

Dr. Howard

- Medical Anthropology, Indigenous Health
- Current Research: examining materialities of Indigenous sovereignty in the meaning-making processes engaged by Indigenous peoples with museum objects of social and cultural significance. Having recently completed major ethnographic research in an obesity clinic, she is also currently writing about bariatric surgery, tracing its recent history of developing into a “cure” for diabetes and the implications this has for patient choice and identity.

Email: howardh@msu.edu

Dr. Tetreault

- Linguistic Anthropology
- Dr. Tetreault's current project addresses the interactional styles whereby French adolescents of Algerian descent construct and express their emergent identities as Arab Muslims and French youth.

Email: tetreau7@msu.edu

Biological Anthropology

Dear Ms. Baker,

My name is Jane Davis and I am a MPH candidate at the University of Illinois at Chicago, School of Public Health. I am pursuing a concentration in Global Health and I have worked with UNICEF as a volunteer. I wanted to reach out to you to discuss the possibility of completing an internship with your organization this summer working on the Global Health Initiative.

I know you are very busy, but I would love to talk to briefly about the opportunities that might be available at your organization. I am more than willing to accommodate your schedule. Please let me know when you are available.

Thank you for your time in advance.

Sincerely,

Jane Davis
